

Abstract

A method for searching, retrieving and displaying data from email storage locations is disclosed. The method of the present invention utilizes a search feature working with an email application to retrieve data from stored email messages. The search feature locates and retrieves data based upon a user-input search parameter. The retrieved data is inserted into a newly created document. The data is edited to redact any data that is duplicative.

10650" 0244900